Analysis of Recent Investment Returns

Second Quarter 2023

The following discussion presents comparative data for DERP's Investment Returns for the most-recent Quarterly, 12-Month, 5-Year, and 10-Year Periods. Analysis and highlights of portfolio performance are presented below. All figures are net of fees.

The DERP portfolio advanced 2.5% in the second quarter, as equity markets around the world continued to rise. The best performance was concentrated in a few large US-based technology stocks. Non-US equity markets also rose, but at a slower pace. Interest rates increased slightly, with the Federal Reserve's 10th consecutive 25 basis point hike occurring in May, followed by a decision to pause in June. Fixed income values fell modestly in the environment. Inflation showed continued signs of abating, and although the China economy shows signs of stress, emerging markets valuations overall were up slightly.

Our quarterly return of 2.5% matched the total fund policy index and was slightly behind other large public plans, which produced gains of 2.6%.

For the trailing 12 months, DERP gained 5.1%, trailing both the blended benchmark and the peer group returns of 6.8% and 7.6%, respectively. The trailing 5-Year annual compounded return was 5.9%, behind the fund policy index of 6.4% and the median large public plan of 6.5%. For the 10-year period, the DERP portfolio return was 6.8% which lagged the return of our blended benchmark of 7.1% and our peers of 7.3%. The disappointing results for the 1, 5, and 10 year trailing periods are explained by underperformance in just the last 12 months, as one year ago (2Q22) results compared favorably to benchmark and peers for these same trailing time periods. Without trying to excuse our results over the last year, it helps to contextualize if we understand we have a larger allocation to private equity than our peers, and a correspondingly smaller exposure to public equities. Although our total public equity portfolio did quite well in the last 12 months, earning more than 18%, we have a smaller allocation (at ~40%) than most others. In contrast, our large private equity portfolio (~11.5% allocation) lost 9.4% in the same period. We fully expect future private equity results to more than compensate for recent markdowns and to produce returns greater than public equities. A recovery in private equity alone will be sufficient to return our results to a favorable position.

Quarterly Portfolio Analysis

Our US stock portfolio rose 8.5% in the quarter. As noted above, a small number of large stocks held by our large cap managers made the major contribution.

The international equity holdings were up 3.6%, ahead of the benchmark return of 2.2%, supported by strong outperformance from our emerging markets positions.

Fixed income had a gain of 0.9%, with slight losses in our core bonds offset by gains in our private debt and emerging markets debt positions.

Real estate continued to decline in the quarter, falling 1.3%. Real estate fundamentals remain generally healthy, but higher interest rates are pressuring cap rates and valuations. There remain unresolved issues for office space in the post-pandemic work from home environment. Future returns in this asset class remain biased to the downside.

Natural resources lost 1.6%, as energy prices retreated from earlier highs. Timber holdings increased in value.

Private equity declined 0.5%. Deal activity has slowed, and exits of investments through IPO or sales were negatively impacted. There are signs of recovery in the mergers and acquisitions marketplace, which would have beneficial impact on our portfolio.

Infrastructure rose 1.9% as the underlying investments stabilized reflecting the maturation of acquisitions. Approximately 90% of the cash flows are inflation linked, providing a tailwind in the current environment.

Our defensive hedge fund portfolio rose 2.5%, providing diversification to its core fixed income counterpart which experienced a slight loss.

The second quarter brought our year to date 2023 results to 5.9%, well on our way to our targeted 7.25%. Although there are pockets of worry, overall the portfolio is performing well.
